2 (11 ounce) bags white chocolate chips

12 doughnut holes

semisweet chocolate chips

1 tube red decorator frosting

2 tablespoons vegetable oil

To coat a dozen doughnut holes, melt the white chocolate chips with the oil over low heat (and keep the chocolate warm while you work). With a fork, spear each doughnut hole and submerge into the melted chocolate to coat it; gently tap off any excess.

Stick a semisweet chocolate chip (pointy side in) onto each doughnut hole. Place the forks (handle side down) in a mug and allow the chocolate coating to harden. Use a tube of red decorator frosting to add squiggly veins radiating out from the pupils.
